In the Aftermath of Suicide

The loss of a close loved one under such tragic circumstances is often a difficult experience to cope with effectively. Some loved ones may even consider suicide themselves and family members need to be aware of others in their family who may be struggling to cope with the loss. The American Association of Suicidology @ <http://www.suicidology.org/> is one of the recognized authorities on suicide and its aftermath. Their website contains valuable literature to help understand the complexities of suicide and the grief associated with it.
