

What happens next? Your report will be viewed by the responding officer's immediate supervisor for accuracy and completeness, usually before the end of the shift. It will then be sent to the Records Division for administrative review and proper coding in accordance with the Uniform Crime Reporting program.

Will my report be assigned to a detective? Following the review by the Records Division the report will be reviewed by the Criminal Investigations Division. That review will determine the solvability factors, and determine whether it will be assigned to a detective for further investigation. Assignment to a detective depends on many things, but the main consideration is whether there is sufficient probability that the case can be solved and prosecuted. Some of the additional factors considered in the review include what type of crime, forensic evidence, witnesses, amount of loss, traceable property, the cooperation of the involved parties with the investigation, willingness by all parties to prosecute and appear in court. This process takes time and it may be several days before you are contacted by a Detective. In some cases you may be contacted and your case assigned sooner depending on severity of the crime.

Will I be contacted? If the report is not assigned for investigation, you will not be contacted. If the report is assigned to a detective, they should contact you within a few days of the assignment.

Will I be updated on the case? Yes, when there is a significant development in the case, or when the case is solved or closed.

What if I discover or have additional information regarding my case? You can make a supplemental report if you have:

- Additional property information that was not available when you made the initial report (serial numbers, additional property you discovered to be stolen, any property that you have located, etc.)
- Suspect or vehicle information that was not available when you made the report.
- Located additional witnesses
- Any other information that will help to solve the case.
